Introduction

Many individuals and organisations have deposited their papers with the University and as a result, it has acquired an unrivalled collection of material, not solely relating to the history and culture of the north-east of Scotland but of national and international importance.

These include records of 19th century schools, some prior to the introduction of the 1872 Education Act. The main school records held are those of the Practising/Demonstration Schools which were established by the teacher training colleges.

The core teaching collection is the 'Aberdeen Colleges of Education' which is a colloquial term for the many different institutions that provided teacher training between 1874 and 2001: Aberdeen Church of Scotland Training College (1874 - 1907), Aberdeen Free Church of Scotland Training College (1875 - 1907), Aberdeen Provincial Training Centre (1907 - 1959), Aberdeen College of Education (1959 - 1987) and Northern College of Education (1987 - 2001), following the merger with Dundee College of Education. Also, Woolmanhill Emergency Physical Training Centre (formerly the Dunfermline College of Hygiene and Physical Education) (1946 - 1950). In 2001 the College merged with the University of Aberdeen to become the Faculty (now School) of Education.

The 'Colleges of Education' archives are very rich and include administrative records including minutes, papers of staff, financial records, estate records and architectural plans. Also, student records including enrolment registers, assessment records, yearbooks and photographs (UNIVERSITY 1421).
