Introduction

Many individuals and institutions have deposited their papers with the University; as a result it has acquired an unrivalled collection of material not solely relating to the history and culture of the north-east of Scotland but also of national and international importance.

The papers comprise diaries, journals, correspondence, maps, plans, photographs and sound recordings.

University roll of honour

In World War Two a total of 182 staff, students and alumni lost their lives. Their service spanned all branches of the Armed Forces and there were exceptional numbers, 85, who served with the Royal Air Force. Soldiers were posted around the world illustrating the global reach of the war with service in the Medical Branch of the Straits Settlements Volunteer Force, Indian Medical Service, Federated Malaya Volunteer Reserve, Indian Mountain Regiment and Kenya Defence Force. They died in places including Malaya, Libya, Java, Burma and Italy, in Japanese prisoner of war camps and on flying operations off Norway and Australia.

The Rolls of Honour have been digitised and are available online (please note that there is a fuller record for World War One including photographs of the fallen and a record of all those who served):

Other relevant collections

NHS Grampian Archives

The archive dates from the foundation of Aberdeen Infirmary in 1739 and contains substantial material relating to hospital provision, notably general and specialist hospitals, cottage hospitals and asylums.

The records of hospitals across the north-east reflect war-time conditions, showing staff arranging for the fitting of blackout blinds, coping with fire-watching duties and, in some hospitals, dealing with war casualties. The Infirmary had to keep some 300 beds free for military wounded and air raid casualties, so patients were frequently sent to convalesce in local auxiliary hospitals - large houses loaned for the purpose. Extra wards, with 200 beds and twin operating theatres, were built at Woodend as part of the Emergency Hospitals Scheme to deal with military wounded, while Haddo House was used for most of the war as an emergency maternity hospital, admitting many pregnant women who had been evacuated from the Central Belt. For more information see the Infirmary minutes (GRHB 1/1), Infirmary admission/discharge registers (GRHB 1/3), Aberdeen Town Medical Officer of Health reports (GRHB E1/1), Aberdeen County Council Medical Officer of Health reports (GRHB E2/4) and with respect to Haddo, the register of notification of births (GRHB E2/8).

Aberdeen Royal Mental Hospital (now Royal Cornhill Hospital) was severely affected by an air raid on Aberdeen in April 1943 when multiple bombs fell on the site, killing three members of staff and one patient and causing extensive damage to hospital buildings. For more information see the hospital minutes (GRHB 2/1).

Medico-Chirurgical Society

The Aberdeen Medico-Chirurgical Society was founded in 1789 in response to the perceived lack of medical teaching offered by both King's and Marischal Colleges. Amongst their collection is included a scrapbook relating to the 153rd (Highland) Field Ambulance R.A.M.C. (T.A.): c.1939 (AMCS/4/11/12). For more information see the website but please note that although the catalogue is available via the University, the papers are held by the Medico-Chirurgical Society.

Printed collections

The Local Collection, accessible via the Reading Room, contains relevant printed material. An important source of local contemporary reports on the war can be found in holdings of local newspapers such as the student magazines and newspapers Alma Mater and Gaudie. Other printed sources are:

Prisoners of War News (volumes 1–8 covering the period November 1940 – June 1945) issued by the British Red Cross Society, Scottish Branch and edited by Malcolm Vivian Hay of Seaton.

The printed collections also hold long runs of published military lists: Army, Indian Army, Naval and some Air Force: 18th century – 20th century.

Access

Materials are available upon request for consultation in the Reading Room. Please search online catalogues to identify individual items.

Please note that some records contain personal information and may be closed for 75 years (for adults) and 100 years (for children aged 16 and under) under the Data Protection Act (1998).
