Introduction

Many notable families have deposited their papers with the University and as a result it has acquired an unrivalled collection of material relating to the history and culture of the north-east of Scotland.

These archives are fantastically rich for the study of estate management, local and regional politics, law enforcement, art and architecture, foreign trade, military adventure and colonial power.

Some collections are particular rich for family historians as they contain large series of tenants’ records, such as those of Arbuthnott of Arbuthnott and the Earls of Fife (Duff House). The sources include writs, letter books, rentals, tacks, accounts, correspondence (between owner and tenant) and plans.

Some collections are weightier than others with certain types of record but many will include these general types:

1. Legal and business documents: comprising the collection of title deeds and other legal papers relating to land ownership, including financial papers.

2. Estate papers: comprising those documents relating to the administration of the estates, including accounts, rentals, and estate development.

3. Family papers: comprising the records relating more particularly to the history and genealogy of the family, together with personal papers and correspondence.

Please note that if there is a description of individual papers (for example Gordon of Haddo), this indicates that only part of the collection of family papers are held at Special Collections.

Other relevant collections

Scottish Catholic Archives

There are numerous sources within the records of the Scottish Catholic Church. This extensive collection relates to the Catholic Church from the 12th century prior to the restoration of the Scottish Catholic Hierarchy in 1878. The collection contains material of regional, national and international significance and provides evidence of the survival of Catholicism both in Scotland and abroad through the archives of its missions, seminaries and colleges. There are also extensive collections relating to prominent Catholic families, many in the north of Scotland.
