Searching the database

Search Tips

- You can combine and separate your search terms using the Boolean Operators AND or OR or NOT (in uppercase!).
- Quotation marks can be used for phrase searching e.g. “social theory”.
- You can expand your search using * as the truncation symbol, for example phil* will find philosophy, philosopher, philosophical and so on.

The symbol * can also be used as a wildcard within a word; for example wom*n will find woman and women.

There are a number of search options

Clicking on BROWSE allows you to:

- browse an A-Z list of Authors – this gives you short biographical details, plus a link to their documents and sources (documents are the individual chapters or sections of a source)
- browse an A-Z list of Sources (the full-text of titles)
- browse a list of Documents (each section or chapter of each title)
- browse a list of Years (of publication)
- browse a list of Theories (by author’s theoretical perspective and by social theories) and
- browse a list of Subjects.

Clicking on FIND gives you two options:

- Find by Sources
  - If looking for a particular title, type the details in the Source title search box e.g. the School and Society will find the John Dewey book.
  - You can also use Source title as a keyword search. For example, a search for society will find all the items with society in the title such as Baudrillard’s The Consumer Society and Durkheim’s The Division of Labor in Society.
- Find by Author

Clicking on SEARCH gives you two options:

- SIMPLE search allows you to search within the text or to search for an author or for a particular title. As you type you can check your author or title details as suggestions appear. (You can also use the Terms button).

- ADVANCED search allows you to search more specifically, for example within document titles which allows you to search for chapters by name. You can also search for theories or books discussed by the author. [See image for an Advanced Search within the text]
Displaying the results

1. After the search the screen will refresh and display the results found – it should state at the top of the results list how many were returned for your search.
2. You can click on Document to see the chapter.
