

THE SCOTS CLASSICS REPRINTS.

Each 24 pages, long 12mo demy, with crisply-written memoir of each author. 1d.

No. 1.—Poems by Robert Ferguson.

No. 2.—Songs and Poems by Robert Tannahill.

No. 3.—Poems and Songs by Rev. John Skinner ("Tullochgorum").

A most handy and attractive form.—Glasgow Evening Times.

Such enterprise deserves recognition, and we heartily express the hope that Mr. Leatham's booklets will have the large sale they deserve.—Stirling Journal.

A dainty conceit in type and form. . . . How vastly superior are these pure songs and poems to the trash often found on bookstalls and station-boys' baskets.—Oban Journal.

BY VARIOUS AUTHORS.

The Revolt of Ghent. By William Morris. Antique paper, broad margins. 6d.
Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam. Fitzgerald's Translation. With an Introduction by James Leatham. 1d.

A King's Lesson. By William Morris. 1d. A prose gem.

Under an Elm-Tree. By William Morris. 1d.

Labour's Garland, being Poems for Socialists. Second Edition. Cream of the poets. A really grand selection. 32 pages. 1d.

Looking Backward. By Edward Bellamy. 3d.

The Parable of the Water Tank. By Edward Bellamy. 1d.

The Epic of God. By A. MONCUR SIME. Cloth. 1s.

The spirit of this book is admirable, and it is simply and tastefully written. It will help men to the true understanding of religion.—Prof. A. B. BRUCE, D.D., Glasgow.

It contains only seven sermons. Yet it has given us more uplifting of heart, it has brought us closer to the mind of Christ, than any of the great volumes of theological speculation we have ever read.—The Expository Times.

A striking and very unconventional volume of sermons; and all worth reading.—The Manchester Guardian.

A JOURNAL OF LIFE and LITERATURE.

Edited by JAMES LEATHAM

Mid-Monthly, Threepence.

SOME UNSOLICITED (BUT WELCOME) OPINIONS.

Alderman BEN TURNER, Batley, writes:—I really like THE GATEWAY. It has "guts" and niceness in it as well as fire.

Mr. BEN RILEY, N.A.C., Huddersfield, writes:—We all of us continue to enjoy THE GATEWAY. It is usually read by the whole household before it has been twenty-four hours in the place.

Mr. DAN IRVING, Burnley:—I have another subscriber. . . . Hope the Mag. is doing well: it deserves to: it's bright and by-ordinary'.
