PLEASE NOTE CAREFULLY:

The full set of school regulations and procedures is contained in the Undergraduate Student Handbook which is available online at your MyAberdeen page. Students are expected to familiarise themselves not only with the contents of this leaflet but also with the contents of the Handbook. Therefore, ignorance of the contents of the Handbook will not excuse the breach of any School regulation or procedure.

You must familiarise yourself with this important information at the earliest opportunity.

Students are asked to make themselves familiar with the information on key institutional policies which been made available within MyAberdeen (https://abdn.blackboard.com/bbcswebdav/institution/Policies). These policies are relevant to all students and will be useful to you throughout your studies. They contain important information and address issues such as what to do if you are absent, how to raise an appeal or a complaint and how seriously the University takes your feedback.

These institutional policies should be read in conjunction with this course guide, in which School specific policies are detailed. Further information can be found on the University’s Infohub webpage or by visiting the Infohub.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

How did the Jesus movement turn into the church? At what point did the church decide Jesus was God? How can God be one and three? What is heresy and why did it matter? How did Christianity relate to surrounding philosophy? Did theology develop and change? What are the sources for Christian thought and doctrine? The course introduces students to these questions through the rich history of Christian thought by considering a number of representative theological thinkers, such as Origen, Athanasius, Augustine, Anselm, Aquinas, Luther and Calvin. Assessment is through two short essays and a final essay.

INTENDED AIMS AND LEARNING OUTCOMES

This course invites students to explore the rich history of Christian thought through study of a range of important thinkers from the time of the early church up to the era of the Reformation. The development of theological ideas and the unfolding of doctrinal controversies are examined through close consideration of these representative thinkers in their historical contexts. The intended learning outcomes of the course are:

A. Knowledge:
   a. to grasp the lineaments of the history of Christian thought as represented by the work of selected leading thinkers;
   b. to continue to reflect upon and to practice theological reflection and argument;
   c. to deepen appreciation of the distinctiveness of Christian belief and its relation to other philosophies and religious traditions; and
   d. to continue to reflect upon the nature and stakes of contemporary debates regarding central Christian teaching in view of the longer history of the tradition.

B. Discipline-specific Skills:
   a. to reflect critically upon the doctrines of the Christian faith in their historical formulation;
b. to acquire the capacity to engage theological positions different from one’s own with sympathy and integrity;
c. to gain familiarity with different theological methodologies; and
d. to acquire a measure of precision in writing through evaluating a specific theological problem.

C. Transferable Skills:
a. to explore intellectual problems through collaboration and interaction with other students;
b. to communicate effectively in writing through the completion of set assignments;
c. to gain skill in gathering and analysing data in both primary and secondary literature;
d. to be able to use IT for research and for keeping apprised of developments within the course;
e. to acquire a measure of discipline in the organisation of one’s time; and
f. to acquire a sense of the broad contours of a field of research.

ESSAYS

Essays which are more than 10% too long or too short (including quotations and footnotes, but excluding bibliography) will be penalised.

LIST OF ESSAY TOPICS

1. Set Historical Text / Gobbet

Comment historically, theologically and critically on a set gobbet from one of the following (available on MyAberdeen):

   a. Justin Martyr;
   b. Irenaeus of Lyons; or
   c. Tertullian.

2. Mid-term essay

Students should write an essay on one of the following, using lecture materials and independent reading from the bibliography on MyAberdeen and through independent research:

   a. Critically assess the way in which one early church father engages with the philosophy contemporary to him.
   b. Consider critically the extent to which the three-fold order of ministry (deacon, priest and bishop) is present in the letters of Ignatius of Antioch.
   c. ‘Origen is a Biblical Theologian’. Critically assess the extent to which you agree with this statement giving reasons for your answer.
   d. Outline the Trinitarian theology of the Cappadocians, and consider critically the extent to which modern appropriations of their theology reflect their original concerns.
   e. Explain Athanasius’ use of the term homoousios, and evaluate the extent to which this term points to the central concern of Athanasius’ theology.

3. Final course essay
Students should write a final essay on one of the following, answering the question demonstrating they have done independent research and offering comment on the context of the theologians discussed. The answer should also contain evaluation. Students should not write on the theologian on whom they wrote their set historical text / gobbet answer. The essay choices are:

a. Compare and contrast the theological method of two theologians studied, taking their contextual settings into consideration.

b. Compare and contrast the Christology of two theologians studied, assessing the impact of their historical context on their theologies.

c. Compare and contrast the approaches to the Trinity in two theologians studied, assessing the extent to which they reflect or depart from their contextual settings.

ASSESSMENT DEADLINES

1. Gobbet exegesis of historical text (25%): Thursday 11th October.
2. Mid-term essay (25%): Thursday 1st November.
3. Final course essay (50%): Thursday 22nd November.
