Introduction

Special Collections have established an Oil and Gas Archive to hold collections relating to the oil and gas industry, spanning 40 years. All areas are represented in holdings, including major companies, the supply chain and smaller personal collections. The University acts as a physical repository for deposited material, but also as a virtual hub for information and resources relating to the industry held elsewhere.

The University is part of the Capturing the Energy Project which aims to promote wider recognition of the technical and cultural importance of the offshore oil and gas industry and encourage retention of significant records for research and education. www.capturing-the-energy.org.uk/.

Operators and business records

TOTAL E&P UK: Frigg Transportation System, MCP-01 and St Fergus papers: 1972 – current. Capturing the Energy's first major project was recording the UK part of the Frigg system, tying in with similar work at the Norwegian Petroleum Museum in Stavanger. The project documented 40 years of innovation and activity, creating an important, comprehensive and unique resource. A wide variety of material has been collected, including engineering drawings, technical manuals, operational records, company journals, photographs, and film and video footage. Oral history interviews with people involved with MCP-01 or St Fergus capture the personal side. A selection of records are also available in digital format (MS 3801). www.capturing-the-energy.org.uk/frigg/.
