Introduction
Many individuals, families, organisations and businesses have deposited their papers with the University; as a result it has acquired an unrivalled collection of material not solely relating to the history and culture of the north-east of Scotland but also of national and international importance.

Old Aberdeen was originally a separate burgh and was erected into a burgh of barony in 1489. It was incorporated into Aberdeen City in 1891.

Please also note that this guide should be consulted in conjunction with the factsheets QG HCOL043: Resources relating to Aberdeen City in Special Collections and QG HCOL044: Resources relating to Aberdeenshire in Special Collections. Also see QG HCOL054: Map and plan resources in Special Collections and QG HCOL010: Photographic resources in Special Collections.

Archival collections
University institutional papers
The University's own records are diverse and range from the original senatus books to charters, dispositions, writs and other legal documents relating to the regulation of the colleges, their teaching, and in support of their considerable landholdings. There are letters, licences and agreements between the two colleges of King's and Marischal and between them and the Town, Parliament, and even Crown; the colleges had a powerful political dimension, and they operated on a local, national and international level.

More comprehensively, from the 18th century onwards we have student registers, bursary and trust papers, inventories and catalogues, records regarding building repairs and papers concerning rectorial elections and staff appointments (KINGS).

The University's collection of plans relating to King's College, King's College Chapel and the University of Aberdeen is a rich resource charting the history of the University's buildings. The plans range from the detailed architectural drawings of James Cromar Watt to utility plans used by the estates teams.
