

UNIVERSITY OF ABERDEEN

ETHICS ADVISORY GROUP

REMIT

Ethics Advisory Group

The Ethics Advisory Group exists to further the overall aims of our ethics and governance policies and processes, to oversee the activities of individual ethics review boards ensuring the highest ethical standards in research practice; to protecting the safety, dignity, welfare and wellbeing of research participants; to protect researchers from harm and unjust criticism; to take account of legitimate interests of individuals, groups and communities in our research as they relate to ethics and governance; and to provide reassurance to the public of the integrity of our research.

Remit:

- Oversight of institutional ethics and governance processes and activities of review boards, including their establishment
- Share best practice in the ethical review process and associated activities (including technical aspects of the review process)
- Oversight of School Ethics Healthchecks and development of improvement and/or successor exercise
- Oversight of development of institutional ethics processes and implementation of online approval systems
- Arbiter in cases where review boards fail to reach a decision on individual ethics applications
- Monitoring external policy landscapes and good practice elsewhere
- Reporting emerging policy issues to RPC
- Receiving reports on ethics and integrity training from Schools/Postgraduate Research School; review and provide feedback on training offered by the University of Aberdeen
